How does Gilead collect information online?

Gilead websites and apps may collect information that could be potentially personally identifiable about your visits without you actively submitting such information. Unidentified information may be collected using various technologies, such as cookies and web beacons. Cookies are small text files that are transferred to your computer's hard disk by a website. Web beacons (also referred to as GIF files, pixels, or internet tags) help Gilead understand how you navigate around Gilead websites. As part of your use of Gilead websites, your internet browser automatically transmits to Gilead websites some of this information, such as the URL of the website you just visited and the browser version your computer is operating. Passive information collection technologies can make your use of Gilead websites easier by allowing Gilead to provide better service, customize Gilead websites based on consumer preferences, compile statistics, analyze trends, and otherwise administer and improve Gilead websites. You can prevent the storage of cookies by adjusting the settings on your browser, though certain features of Gilead websites may not work without use of passive information collection technologies. Information collected by these technologies cannot be used to identify you without additional information.

Some of Gilead's business partners, with whom Gilead contracts to carry out the Services (e.g., website providers), may use their cookies on Gilead websites and apps. Although Gilead may not have direct access to or control over such cookies, this Privacy Statement governs the use of cookies by Gilead and such business partners on Gilead websites and apps. Gilead may also allow social media companies (e.g., Facebook) to put "widgets" on Gilead websites. These third-party tools may also be used to track you across websites. For example, so long as you are logged in to Facebook, every time you land on a webpage that has a Facebook widget, Facebook will know you are on that webpage. Gilead does not control the privacy practices of these third parties.

Some internet browsers allow you to limit or disable the use of tracking technologies that collect unidentified information, such as a “Do Not Track” (“DNT”) setting. Currently, we do not respond to DNT signals.
